

Feed the Future Country Fact Sheet

Online Version: <https://www.feedthefuture.gov/article/us-ambassador-un-food-and-agriculture-agencies-visit-tanzania-and-malawi>

U.S. Ambassador to the UN Food and Agriculture Agencies to Visit Tanzania and Malawi

Sharon Ketchum/USUN Rome

Augustino Oturia is improving his yields with assistance from Feed the Future.

Ambassador David J. Lane, the U.S. Representative to the United Nations Food and Agriculture Agencies in Rome, will travel to Tanzania and Malawi from January 7-15, 2013. He will visit rural communities and observe how the United States and the UN Food and Agriculture Agencies collaborate to support farmers, businesses and government officials improve food security and promote agricultural development in these countries.

The Ambassador will be accompanied by a group of journalists from France, Ghana, Italy, Malawi, Niger, Tanzania, and Uganda. They will visit a variety of projects run by the U.S. Government, the UN Food and Agriculture Organization (FAO), the World Food Programme (WFP) and the International Fund for Agricultural Development (IFAD). These include farmers' cooperatives, a market access project and a Food For Education program in Tanzania, as well as an Agricultural Commodity Exchange and a Community Management of Malnutrition program as in Malawi.

Ambassador Lane will blog about his trip on DipNote and you can follow the trip on Facebook and Twitter. Visit the U.S. Mission to the UN Agencies in Rome website for further information on what the U.S. Government and the UN Agencies are doing to improve food security and promote sustainable agricultural development in the world.

This article originally appeared on the U.S. Mission to the UN Agencies in Rome website.

Additional Resources:

- Read the follow-up press release on Ambassador Lane's trip to Tanzania
- Read Ambassador Lane's remarks in Malawi
- Read a blog series by Ambassador Lane on the trip
- Follow Ambassador Lane's trip on the U.S. Mission to the UN Agencies in Rome Facebook page
- View more photos from the trip on the U.S. Mission to the UN Agencies in Rome Flickr photostream