Avoiding Future Famines: We Have the Tools

The Horn of Africa is facing the worst drought in 60 years, with famine now affecting parts of Somalia. It doesn't have to be this way. Droughts are cyclical and will continue to occur. They don't have to lead to famine. We have the tools and can lead the way to helping ensure communities are resilient and can feed themselves.

This video, from the ONE campaign, shows how Ethiopia has become more resilient to drought thanks to government leadership and support from the international community.
